Hands On Science

In order for scientific learning to happen, children must be introduced to science in the classroom at an early age. Many of us may remember science as a boring subject in school, involving lots of memorization. But science is really a way of thinking and trying to understand the world. Current research shows that active, hands-on learning is the most meaningful and effective way for young children to learn.

July–September 2021 “Ready for School, Ready for Life!”

By: Academy of American Poets

Here are some poems and rhymes you can read to your child.

Five Cookies

Action poem

Five little cookies in the bakery shop.
Shinning bright with the sugar on top.
Along comes (child's name) with a nickel to pay.
He/she buys a cookie and takes it away.
(continue with four, three, two and one).

WEATHER SCIENCE FAIR PROJECTS

Track changes to the weather over a period of time by making a barometer to measure air pressure, a rain gauge to measure rain, a pinecone weather station and other fun weather science activities

Weather based investigations are great if you have a period of weeks or months to track changes and a perfect for learning to record and display data. We love weather science!
